

Dr. Gizem Calibasi-Kocal graduated from Ege University, Turkey, holding a bachelor degree in Biochemistry. Then she received her MSc and PhD degrees of Basic Oncology from Dokuz Eylul University with honors. From 2013 to 2015, she worked in USA in the field of microfluidic technologies for cancer metastasis in Harvard University and Stanford University as pre-doctoral research fellow. In 2018, she joined Yilmaz Lab in Koch Institute for Integrative Cancer research at MIT for post-doctoral research process. Her research interest has focused on metastatic processes of colorectal cancer in terms of tumor microenvironment and metabolism, as well as pharmacogenetic applications in cancer management.